

End-of-Life and Bereavement Care in our Buddhist communities

This independent study course is to be taken co-currently with the Buddhist Grief Counselling Course or the Buddhist Contemplative Care at End-of-Life Course.

This is a group project. Students will meet in a small group to do research in a Buddhist tradition that is not their own, and interview a monastic about how grief counselling (when taking the grief counselling course) or end-of-life care (when taking the end-of-life care course) is practised in that community. Each group is expected to record a video that explains what they have learned and share and discuss the video with other students.
